Can you believe it's already March? January felt as though it lasted at least 6 years, but February lasted roughly half an hour. With March moving at lightning speed and our weather continuing to be predictably erratic, have you made sure your roof is in top condition? Proper maintenance on your roof now can ensure that your building is ready to withstand heavy snow, torrential rains, and even our favorite form of precipitation, hail.

This month's luncheon will cover various topics pertaining to roofing and it's preventative maintenance. Please join us for good food, networking, and an insightful presentation.

Please note, we are back at BIAGGI'S this month.

Back to Basics Series

2nd Topic: Roof Maintenance

Presented by: John Fleming, Weathercraft Roofing

We are excited to introduce Part 2 of our Back to Basics Series!

Throughout the year, select luncheons will have topics that cover the basics of facilities management and building systems.
Our topic this month is all about roofing and its preventative maintenance.

What should you know as a Facility Professional responsible for your building roof system?
What is the typical life span of a commercial roof? How can you maximize that lifespan?
What recommended preventative maintenance should you be doing on an annual basis?
What are the components of a roof that you should understand and be familiar with?
What are the roof types available and what is recommended for our environment?
What are the current trends in Roofing?
Can you really save energy with a specific roof type?

Even if you are well-versed in roofing, come on in for a refresher, learn what’s trending, and get some questions answered. Also consider bringing members of your team that could benefit from learning more about this aspect of Facility Management.

John Fleming has been the owner of Weathercraft Roofing since 2001. He graduated from the University of Montevallo with a Bachelor of Science in Political Science and Business.
